Area's Rainfall In May Amounts To 4.79 Inches

The area's precipitation during May totaled 4.79 inches, increasing the total for the year to 17.11 inches, which is 2.18 inches above normal for the first five months. The average amount of rainfall for May is 4.02 inches.

Of the 4.79 inches of rain last month, 2.70 inches was recorded on the first day at the station maintained by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at the Chain of Rocks canal locks.

Rain was recorded on 13 days during the month, including traces less than a hundredth of an inch) on three days. The days with rain in May were the fewest for any month this year. Rain or snow fell on 17 days in May.

Decision On Sewage Plant Soon In Venice

Treatment Plant For Lansdowne, 2 Local Cities Is Proposed

Mayor John E. Lee said Friday night he expects a meeting with Madison city officials and a decision on a proposed Venice-Madison-East Side Levee & Sanitary district sewage treatment plant soon.

Dr. Lee said he was surprised that cost of the new levee district plan, extending Granite City and East St. Louis did not go higher than has been estimated. Cost of the original plan was set at $9 annually per household, while cost under the new proposal is estimated at $11.

The levee district plan calls for a new line to run from Madison through Venice to a levee district north of East St. Louis.

Mayor Lee unveiled the plan to the Venice aldermen through a letter from F. E. Wisely of Horner & Shiffrin, consulting engineers to the Venice district. Wisely's letter confirmed a discussion at a meeting of levee district Venice and Madison officials and engineering representatives May 22.

Levee district studies in 1959 and last September are the only district-wide studies which have been made. Wisely related. He said other studies have been on a local basis only, and therefore are not directly comparable.

Conservative Report
He said the September study showed a joint Venice-Madison treatment facility operated by the levee district at Lansdowne could be built at a cost of $2,600,000 and operated at a fee of $11 annually per household.

The report is considered conservative. The father is included, it does not take into consideration the possibilities of federal aid.

While a joint Venice-Madison project would be relatively expensive, it would allow Madison and Venice as well as Lansdowne to share the cost of the Lansdowne sewer.

City-Operated Treatment Plant Less Costly
Economy-minded Granite City aldermen are being asked to review once again the three-in-one program proposed by the Citizens' Sewer & Drainage committee.

Through separate sewer systems for sanitary sewage and storm water drainage, not only will the cost of a sewage treatment plant be cut by $170,000, but the annual operating cost of a smaller treatment plant will be $70,000 a year. Over the life of the revenue bond issue, the savings in 40 years would amount to $2,800,000.

At a recent meeting of Democratic precinct committee, the discussion turned to the $3.25 minimum monthly charge per household. Figuring on a napkin, a committee member brought out that the cost would average $39-a-year, or $1560 over the 40-year period.

GC To Start Drive On City Auto Tags

Granite City Police Chief Raymond Willard said today he will instruct his Friday night patrol to begin its annual crackdown on 1962-63 city auto licenses within a few days. The drive against delinquent auto owners customarily is conducted in June.

The new license became due May 1, but a month or two (until a new law is given) motorists to buy the $3 windshield stickers. Police then begin setting up road blocks at downtown intersections and placing arrest tickets on parked cars that fail to display the new stickers.

City Clerk A. L. Stevens said this year's sale is near the 7500 mark. Last year, 11,559 licenses were sold.

Talks Between Teachers, School District Likely
The final week of the 1961-62 school term has arrived with no settlement on the terms of next year's agreement between the Granite City school district and American Federation of Teachers Local 743.

Additional negotiations are anticipated, but it is not known how soon they will develop. Final day of the spring term is Friday, June 8.

It was learned that the local salary and policy committee submitted a proposal Friday afternoon, described as the same as previous proposals. A meeting of the Local 743 membership is expected to take place tomorrow.

No special school board meetings are currently scheduled. It was learned today from Board President Robert N. Spangler. The board at its last session authorized a special meeting if a teachers' meeting received "in reasonable proximity" of the school district's offer. The board also authorized an additional committee from the administrative staff.

Mrs. Genevieve Gideon, president of the local and a teacher at Mitchell grade school, declined to confirm plans for a teachers' meeting tomorrow, but said she would be in the school building for negotiations. She said a statement will be issued after an agreement has been reached between the school system and federation.

Requests, Offer
On May 8, the local proposed an $88 monthly increase in the salary schedule for 1962-63 and submitted ten other requests. The suggested change in the schedule was estimated by the district as costing $418,400 plus $60,000 in increments.

The board on May 22 proposed a $125,000 two year increase, in addition to the $120,000 in increments. The board also requested that teachers accumulate additional years of experience.

It was announced May 28 that the teachers' committee would consider a 77 percent increase in their schedule providing the other requests, including expanded sick leave and one day of leave for each teacher, were met. The district estimated it would cost $100,000.

The school band played for the recessional, and the advanced mixed chorus sang "O God, Thou Faithful God, Thou Is the Light of the World."

Venice Council Calls For Bids On City Garage

A call for bids on construction of a new city garage was approved by the Venice city council Friday night, with bids to be received until 2 p.m. June 14.

Work is to begin on the garage within 10 days after the contractor is notified of bid acceptance. The job is to be completed within 120 consecutive calendar days.

Bids will be accepted at the office of Auditor Virgil H. Dulgeroff, 2021 Edison avenue.

The building will include a 50x102-foot garage area, a 22x102-foot storage and office area and a police pistol range. The firing range will be below the office and storage space, and will have the same dimensions.

The building is to be heated with gas unit heaters, with electric heaters in the offices.

In other action, the council approved a resolution to advertise for bids and award contracts for paving and curbing West Madison street in Venice.

Contracts are to be awarded for similar work on the street in Madison. The Venice council agreed to let the work be done under a single contract and pay a proportionate share of the cost from motor fuel tax funds.

The council also authorized a request by Fire Chief Michael Leathemian, jr. to display the city's new fire truck with its hydraulic carriage hose-lifting equipment at a fire-training school June 12 at the University of Illinois.

Some Support For Zoning At Fort Russell Hearing

Support of Madison county zoning was expressed by several persons attending the 16th hearing, held Friday afternoon in Bethel for Fort Russell township. Some of the others in the hearing of 65 criticized the proposal.

Two proposed changes in zoning classifications were received and referred to the full County Zoning Commission for study. Commissioners present were Vice-Chairman Howard Kaseberg, who presided, and Edwin G. Schmitt and Harry Kluge, Alton May, chairman of the zoning and subdivision control committee of the County Board of Supervisors, also attended.

In addition to the two formal requests, one citizen suggested stricter regulation of industrial practices. Zoning was discussed generally after the initial phase of the hearing, which related to specific suggestions for ordinance and zoning district changes.

Some of the comments dealt with unrelated topics or misconceptions. A chorus of "No" votes urged Fort Russell officials to oppose the program. The hearing followed a meeting held at the same location the previous night under sponsorship of opponents of zoning.

The expressions of support from the audience were recited at the hearing series, which had been attended principally by the foes and by residents who had heard the opponent's version of zoning information. Organizations favoring zoning are urging that persons supporting the plan attend future hearings.

The hearings are to be followed by recommendations from the commission to the County Board. Madison county at present does not have zoning for its unincorporated sections.

Police Escort Unruly Soldiers Out of Town

Two Granite City Engineer Depot soldiers were fined twice the same day in Edwardsville. Police Chief John E. Hartung said he narrowly missed being hit Friday as he was crossing North Main street at the city hall by an auto driven by Joseph Sorby, 22. His passenger was John R. Taylor, 22. Both are from Escanaba, Mich.

Sorby admitted driving 65 miles an hour in a residential zone, police said. He was fined $45 including costs for reckless driving. Taylor was assessed $5 court costs for disorderly conduct.

Police said the two had been drinking, so the car keys were confiscated until they "calmed down." The driver apparently had the other keys, however, for the two took the car and drove around again. They were arrested on similar charges when Alderman Logan Bayer signed a complaint a short time later.

This time the magistrate assessed the pair $5 court costs each and ordered them out of town to make sure they left a police escort took them to the city limits. Depot authorities were notified.

Daybreak Optimists Hear About Stocks

The Daybreak Optimist club, meeting Saturday at the YMCA, heard George Frangoulis of the past week's stock market activity in which prices dipped sharply, then recovered.

He said emotional factors caused many to sell. Lower echelons of federal agencies, interfering in too many ways, caused others to sell. Marginal accounts could not be mite and had to be sold.

"We are in a good business year, however," he said. "Those who bought into the jagging market caused people to regain confidence."

A. W. Morris III Moving Family To Hawaii

A. W. Morris III, a partner in Morris Realty Co. here with his father and brother, is moving his family to Hawaii for a year, but will continue to spend time at the office here.

Morris told the Press-Record he and his family will leave June 14 for Maui Island, Hawaii, stopping enroute at the Seattle World's Fair before leaving by plane from San Francisco for the Islands.

Morris, an active leader in local civic affairs and a war II Navy fighter pilot, also is associated with his father-in-law, W. C. Jennings of Honolulu, in real estate developments on the main island of Maui. He plans to keep his business connections here and will be traveling back and forth.

His family now resides in Clayton, but will live at Maui for a year. Mrs. Morris is a former resident of Hawaii, and their children will go to school at Honolulu and at Maui. "It will be a great experience for them," Morris said.

The youngsters, all of school age, are Sally, 15, Virginia, 13, Lex, 10, Neil, 8, and Richard, 6.

Hit And Run Accident

Thomas W. Gaines, 35, of 1009 Kirpatrick, stopped his auto in the 1600 block of Madison avenue Sunday to discharge a passenger, and it was hit by another, the driver of which failed to stop. A fender on the Gaines' car was damaged.

Charged In Crash

Gerald De Lotier, 35, of 4539 Walter avenue, was given an arrest ticket Friday for following too closely. He posted $11 cash bail. His auto struck the rear of a car driven by Paul Wolf, 30, of St. Louis.

Study Not Made

Mayor Lee said he regrets that studies have not been made of a joint treatment plant to serve Granite City, Madison and Venice. If such a plant could be operated by the Army Corps of Engineers, he said, it might prove the most economical.

"But since such a study has not been made," he added, "the levee district plan may be the most suitable."

Edward Juncus, the city's consulting engineer, has left on vacation and was not present at the meeting. Mayor Lee said he expects a meeting with Madison officials—and a decision on the levee district proposal—as soon as Juncus returns.

Bi-State Agency May Not Repay Funds

Funds provided by Granite City and other area communities to finance a $100,000 transit survey by the Bi-State Development Agency will not be repaid if the Bi-State plan is not used, an official said yesterday.

C. M. Ross, Belleville, acting chairman of the Bi-State board of commissioners, said the money will be repaid only if Bi-State goes ahead with operation of the proposed mass public transit system.

If Bi-State does go through with the plan, the $100,000 will be repaid and considered part of the cost of acquiring existing transit lines, Ross said. If not, the funds will be considered grants from the communities to finance the study.

General Steel Industries and Granite City Steel Co. each gave $2000 and Community Co. $1000 in the name of Granite City, while the cities of Alton, Belleville and East St. Louis each provided $5000 for the study.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT To The Parents of High School Graduates

The costs of a college education are steadily increasing. For many families it is difficult to lay aside enough money, in advance, to handle these costs. To meet the problem, Granite City Trust has initiated a unique, new plan. The College Education Financing Plan lets you pay for education out of regular income in convenient monthly installments over a 6-year period.

COLLEGE EDUCATION FINANCING PLAN

HERE'S THE WAY THE PLAN WORKS:

- 1.) You select the particular school or college for your child and determine how much you will need (up to $10,000) to pay all the expenses. Use the handy table below.
- 2.) As soon as your application is approved, we will advance the first semester expenses to you. Remainder of the loan will be paid to you in 7 additional payments beginning at the start of each succeeding semester.
- 3.) Budgeted monthly payments will start one month after the date of the loan, continuing up to six years for a 4-year course.

COVERS ALL EDUCATIONAL EXPENSES. You may finance one, two, three or four years of education. Funds are advanced at the beginning of each semester. Up to $10,000 is available; however, you may borrow as much or as little as you need.

SPREADS THE COST EVENLY. No need to face a large cash outlay at the beginning of each school semester. Instead, you can repay in sensible monthly installments, taking up to 72 months to repay. All interest you pay is tax-deductible, and the rates are about 1/2 of a normal installment loan.

COMPLETE INSURANCE Coverage Included. Should the borrower (parent or sponsor) die, all payments due to the bank are automatically cancelled; and the student continues to receive all the money he needs to complete his college education. Should the student die, any balance owed by the family is cancelled. No medical examination is required for this insurance.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE? If you are a parent, relative, guardian or sponsor, Granite City Trust will welcome your application. So, come in and talk over your youngster's tuition needs now. There is no obligation!

Nameoki Township Hearing On County Zoning Tomorrow

A more realistic balance of opinion is hoped for as a series of Madison county zoning hearings moves into the Quad-City area tomorrow. The public hearing for Nameoki township is scheduled for 1 p.m. Tuesday at the Nameoki township hall, 4250 State Highway 162, located on the right side of the Route 162 pavement, a short distance east of Route 111.

Residents of the township who favor zoning adoption are being urged to attend and speak out by organizations which have gone on record as favoring the proposal.

A group of opponents has been successful at previous hearings in discouraging anti-zoning comments by members of the audience.

Conducted By Commission

The hearing is to be given by the seven-member County Zoning Commission seeking any suggestions for improvement in the wording of the tentative zoning ordinance and any requests for revision of the zoning boundaries shown on a map of the township.

Township officials then will take part in the hearing and listen to questions and comments by members of the audience.

The zoning plan, to be submitted to the County Board of Supervisors after hearings are conducted in all 24 townships by the commission, is designed to promote orderly growth and to protect property values in the unincorporated areas of Madison county.

Sixteen hearings have been held so far, and tomorrow's session will be the seventeenth. The eighteenth will be held at 1 p.m. Friday at the Collinsville Veterans of Foreign Wars hall, 1234 Vandalla street, Collinsville.

MORE ABOUT GC Sewer Bond Referendum

The Street and Alley committee, headed by Alderman Estill Von Schmitt, is expected to present a recommendation that about $60,000 of the city's motor fuel tax allotments be used each year for contract sewer cleaning, possibly to start in the downtown business district.

The committee met last week with City Engineer David Johnston, who pointed out MFT funds could be used for sewer cleaning only for combination sewers or drainage sewers. He suggested bids be sought.

Bids for replacement of broken Nameoki avenue sanitary sewer lines are to be sought this week. It was learned from A. W. Pearson of the city's engineering staff, authorization for the project was granted by the council several weeks ago. The council is expecting the levee project to be completed by the night on its request for financial aid in replacing the defective trunk lines, which were installed under the levee district's part of the Nameoki sanitary system contract.

It is hoped the levee district will pay about $100,000 of the construction job estimated under $100,000, with the city to handle engineering, contract award and inspection.

The call for bids probably will be made Thursday, Pearson said.

Routine business—approval of bills and reports—also is on tonight's council agenda.

Beyer-Fuller Nuptials At Emmanuel Baptist Church

Miss Jo Ann Fuller, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fuller, 1924 Lynn avenue, and Donald R. Beyer, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Adam Beyer, 916 Third street, Venice, were married Friday evening at Emmanuel Baptist Church. The sanctuary was decorated with altar bouquets of white gladioli and pom poms, and light was furnished by burning candles in branched candelabra. Rev. Wilbert V. Snider, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church performed the double-ring ceremony at 8 o'clock.

Preceding the service, Gene Hargraves sang "Because" and the Lord's Prayer, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Betty Bloodworth, who played the wedding marches.

White ribbons marked the family pews and the bride was escorted down the aisle by her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of imported Chantilly lace designed with a sabina neckline enhanced with seed pearls, a fitted bodice into which was set long tapering sleeves and voluminous skirt formed of cascade tiers, terminating in a cathedral train. A tiered, silk illusion veil was secured to a pearl and crystal crown and the bridal bouquet, a cascade of white carnations, orange blossoms and greenery with a removable orchid corsage.

The matter of honor was attired in mint green chiffon over taffeta, the gown featuring a bateau neckline, sleeves gathered up by bows at the shoulders. The bridesmaids were in maize organza frocks with scoop necks and short sleeves, the waists encircled with pleated cummerbunds, accented at the back with bustles. Matching picture hats completed their costumes and they held nosegays of white and pale yellow carnations. The little flower girl wore a white lace and taffeta floor-length dress with puffed sleeves, a mint green sash and the long skirt held wide with a hoop. A band of flowers was in her hair and she carried a white basket filled with rose petals.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Fuller selected a dress of beige and brown nylon over taffeta and orange accessories, while the bridegroom's mother wore black and white, and white accessories. Both had corsages of white carnations.

Polish Hall (6-0) dropped Jug's Hideaway (4-2) into a three-way tie for second place in the eight-team league. Also sharing second place are Club Delmar and Sportsman's Club.

Mercer Moves Up, But Maryville Surprises Hearts

Moose Lodge, Carpenter, McAteer Also Win I-C Games

Mercer Funeral Home climbed back into a second-place tie in the Blue division of the Southwestern Illinois Inter-City Baseball league of Wilson Park yesterday afternoon with an important 8-3 victory over Poca-hontas.

Red division counterpart Sacred Heart could not find a fireman in its bullpen and dropped a 12-8 donnybrook to the lowly Red Sox of Maryville.

But the Hearts hung onto second place in the closest competitor Collinville was bumped off by McAteer, 6-5.

Ramping Moose Lodge of East St. Louis scored its seventh straight win with a 4-2 victory 14-2 on the Redbirds' diamond, and Carpenter continued 9-7. Roxana's was with a 4-2 victory at Carpenter.

Moose Lodge moved 2½ games ahead of Sacred Heart as the East St. Louis club remained unbeaten. Mercer and defending champion Poca-hontas, both 4-2, are one game off the Blue division pace being set by the Glasman, who won their fourth straight yesterday.

At Wilson Park Sunday, the Braves managed single tallies in the first, fifth and seventh innings off winning pitcher Bob Vetter (2-1), who had to retire with a blister on his pitching hand in the eighth inning. Jack Buente finished up Vetter gave up five hits, while the Mercermen racked Lonnie Griffith for 12, including a two-run homer in the eighth.

Stegemeier, Don Crabtree and Harold Tankis each collected two hits for Ollie Miller's club, while Bob Allen had three.

Stegemeier drove in four runs during the afternoon, including two on a double in the third when Mercer scored three to overcome a 1-0 Poca-hontas lead.

Mercer put together another three-run frame in the eighth when Tankis, Allen and Buente singled in front of Stegemeier's three-base knock. Rich Wade, starting his first I-C game for Paul Schuler's Hearts, lasted only until the fourth inning. John Rains relieved and, by the time the frame ended, Maryville had plated five runs for a 9-3 lead.

The Hearts came back with three in the fifth off Maryville hurler Bill Johnson, but the Red Sox gave Johnson breathing room again in the seventh when they added three runs off Ronnie Parker, the third Heart hurler.

Sacred Heart threatened in the ninth, scoring twice. Johnson lasted the distance after taking over from starter Len Duda in the fifth.

The Hearts had 11 hits but committed six errors. Maryville won 12-8 in 12 innings.

Safe Boating Recipe -- Mix Courtesy, Caution

(Second of a series)

Compared to the way Americans have taken to pleasure boating in recent years, the proverbial duck is a model of reticence in its affinity for water.

One of the fastest growing forms of outdoor recreation, boating this year will attract more than 40 million Americans, including many hundreds of Quad-City residents.

While the growing interest in water sports is cheered for its contribution to physical fitness, navigation and health authorities also cite the increased risk of water accidents and drownings.

As the number of boats on inland waterways increases, so do the chances for mishap.

Waterways Busy

Already, 8,000,000 boats crowd American rivers, lakes and coasts, and the Mississippi and Illinois rivers in this area are crowded each spring and summer weekend. The total of nearly 7000 drownings a year usually includes several in this vicinity.

Basic guidelines designed to keep the "pleasure" in pleasure boating have been devised.

A list of some of the basic precautions follows:

1. Learn to swim.

2. Make sure you are prepared for emergencies while afloat.

3. Avoid going out alone.

Life Jackets, Extinguisher

4. Every boat should carry approved life preservers. Many are available, ranging from simple floating seat cushions to full-size "Mae West" life jackets.

Strap them on youngsters the moment they step aboard and do not take them off until they are ashore.

5. If your boat has a motor, include a fire extinguisher as part of its regular equipment.

6. When entering or leaving small boat, especially rowboats, step in only at bow or stern end. Stepping into the middle can tip the boat and overturn or swamp it. Never stand up in a rowboat or canoe.

7. Horseplay in a boat has been the cause of more than one tragedy. If you must be a show-off, do it ashore where shorehands are less likely to endanger lives.

Swimming From Boat

8. Swimming off a boat is fun, but do it the safe way. Never

Mexico-Bound Group Plays For 1800; Drive Continues

An estimated 1800 persons crowded the Granite City high school gymnasium last night to hear the Mexico-bound Latin American rhythm ensemble and its parent group, the Coolidge junior high school band.

The concert raised funds for the ensemble's tour of Mexico this summer at the invitation of the Mexican government.

The $6000 goal has not yet been reached, and additional contributions are needed. It was announced at the concert by Mrs. Albert Froemling, drive coordinator and international concert chairman of the ensemble parents' group. The journey is tentatively planned for late July and early August.

Predicts Warm Response

Miss Anna Maria Bartning, acting Mexican consul in St. Louis, told the gathering that the Latin American ensemble is so precise in its interpretation of Mexican rhythms that she is sure it will be received with "extreme appreciation and courtesy in Mexico."

She added, "I couldn't have possibly believed, if I had not been present tonight, that such a large school band as this could play so professionally."

Mayor Leonard R. Davis expressed amazement at the student musicians' competency and said the invitation and visit to Mexico will be a high honor for the local community.

Robert D. Todoroff, Coolidge band director and the leader and originator of the Latin ensemble, voiced appreciation to the community, Chamber of Commerce, Associated Retailers and individuals who have helped in the effort to make the trip possible and successful.

Message Of Good Will

"The ensemble will strive to carry a good message from Granite City as representatives of the Coolidge band, the school system and the entire community," he said.

Careful planning has gone into the trip, with special attention to the safety of eating places and lodging, Todoroff reported.

As an example of the cooperation being received, Davis said, Mexico City's elite hotel, the Monte Casino, is making rooms available for the entire touring group at nominal cost and will permit use of its roof garden, complete with pool and palm trees, for the ensemble's rehearsals.

Mrs. Froemling called attention to assistance being received from Miss Bartning, Cong. Melvin Price, embassies of the two countries, drive contributors and many others helping in various ways.

Ticket Sales Awards

She awarded a transistor radio to Eileen Boushough of the Coolidge band as the top ticket salesman for the benefit concert, with 55 tickets sold.

The second through eighth place ticket sales awards were a radio to Richard Meyer, a camera to Michael Kavoula, a transistorized metronome to Linda Kutosky, an ice chest to James Rucker, two lawn chairs and a lounge to Tom Shoemaker, a sport shirt to Barry Ehling and a bracelet to Sharon Clark.

Members of the Latin ensemble, not eligible for the awards, also were active in selling tickets, Mrs. Froemling related.

Director Honored

During the program, Todoroff was presented with surprise gifts from Bernie Yevin representing the concert band, and Linda Froemling, representing the ensemble. Both cited the

Under a recent change in the Illinois law governing incorporation of municipalities, Judge Kinney said, a 60-day waiting period is required before any action on such a petition can be taken.

He said an additional 30 days or longer will be required to allow time for a ruling after hearing is held, and to call an election if the ruling favors the petition.

The petition was filed May 22, asking incorporation of an area of approximately two square miles with a population of about 400 persons.

Miss Nancee Ann Parks And Sheridan John Dutchik Wed

The Rev. George Sagen officiated at the double-ring ceremony Saturday evening which united in marriage Miss Nancee Ann Parks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monte A. Parks, 3139 Fehling road, and Sheridan John Dutchik, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond F. Dutchik, 6809 Jasponea drive, Little Rock, Ark. First Baptist Church, 21st street and Delmar avenue, was the setting for the nuptials which were followed by a reception at the church.

White gladiolus and pom poms decorated the sanctuary, together with palms and ferns, and light was furnished by burning candles in candelabra and in tall standards down the aisle. The latter were adorned with white ribbon bows and ivy.

Mrs. Frances Balding presided at the organ and accompanied the soloist, Miss Gwendolyn Lee O'Guin, as she sang "Because" and "Wedding Prayer."

The former Miss Parks, given in marriage by her father, selected a gown of gardenia white tulle and Venise lace. The bride had a deep oval neckline and bracelet-length sleeves edged with lace. The sheath skirt was enhanced with a full lace-trimmed overskirt which swept into a graceful train and a pool of silk illusion fell from a pill box of matching fabric trimmed with an overlay of lace accented with seed pearls. The bride carried a cascade of stephanotis, pink sweetbriar roses and lily with a detachable corsage in the center.

Mrs. Herbert Bischoff was matron of honor and Miss Judy Bachelder and Miss Connie Jean Deal, a cousin of the bride, were bridesmaids, serving with two junior bridesmaids, Diana Parks and Linda Dutchik, sisters of the bride and groom, and Debra Griffin, flower girl. Johnnie Bischoff carried the rings.

The honor attendant and bridesmaids were dressed alike in white embroidered eyelet organdy. Street-length they were styled with tight bodices, and wide scoop necks dipping low in the back with four covered buttons to the waist line. Scallop of self material bordered the elbow-length sleeves and the bouffant skirts made with unpressed pleats. The dresses were worn over full, strapless pink polka-dot cotton slips. Pink shoes, short white gloves and pill box headpieces formed of leaves in pastel green, pink rose buds covered with bouffant veiling and a large rose on top completed the costumes. They carried cascades of pink rosebuds, purple statice and variegated ivy.

The junior maids were similarly attired with pink circular headbands, rose buds and small nose veils. The flower girl, dressed like the older girls, with a wide pink sash and pink shoes, carried a white basket filled with rose petals and statice.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Parks chose a pastel pink street-length sheath of silk organza appliqued with silk trimmed with crystals. Matching shoes and a pink silk hat with a circular nose veil were worn. Mrs. Dutchik, the bridegroom's mother, was in powder blue silk organza with a bodice of lace and pearl and sequin trim. Her hat was the same shade. Both mothers wore corsages of white roses.

Mrs. Dutchik had her brother, Robert Dutchik, as best man, and the corps of groomsmen and ushers consisted of Don Stagner, Jerry Wilson, Gary Soudel, John Kazayak, Robert Kozak, Dwain Hall, Anthony Vesdi, James Craycraft and James Baker.

Mindy Krapp and Jan Deal, candelighters, wore white choir robes over pink dresses.

After a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., Jamaica, and Nassau, the newlyweds will live at 3209 Wayne avenue. They will be at home after June 17.

The bride, a 1960 graduate of the Granite City high school, is a reservation agent for one of the major airlines. Mr. Dutchik graduated from the local high school in 1957 and is employed by a St. Louis electrical firm.

Among the out-of-town relatives here for the wedding, besides the bridegroom's parents and his brother and sister-in-law, all of Little Rock, Ark., were his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Able of Wellville, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Eldred of Shreveport, La.; grandparents of the bride, and her uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Deal and family of Lafayette, La.; and Mr. and Mrs. William Stegmue of Oak Park, Ill.

Mrs. John Laritz presided over the guest book and Mrs. Larry Kinder, Mrs. Jerry Wilson and Mrs. Gary Eberhart assisted at the reception.

SURVIVAL SUPPLIES such as these stocks for a 50-person fallout shelter are being furnished under the Defense Department's national civil defense program to provide 14-day stores of food, water and other shelter necessities for an estimated 50-60 million emergency occupants of spaces located by a nationwide survey. The supplies are: (1) Ten water containers holding 17½ gallons each—a quart of water a day per person for 14 days; (2) A kit of radiation detection instruments to measure radioactivity outside the shelter, to check for fallout on food, clothing and the like, and to show individuals' total exposure to fallout; (3) Two sanitation kits, each containing waste disposal equipment and water rationing supplies; (4) Seven cases of canned long-life survival wafers or biscuits totaling 10,000 calories for each person, and (5) A medical kit with first aid care for common ailments of shelter occupants for 14 days in the absence of trained medical personnel. There seems to be a lot of poison ivy this year, judging from the reports and inquiries. Modern weed-killing chemicals, when properly handled, offer a safe, easy and effective method of controlling poison ivy. But in all cases follow the directions on the container label to avoid damage to desirable plants.

Amnitrole, "brush killer" or ammate is recommended for killing poison ivy. Amnitrole is the most effective. It is available in aerosol cans that are convenient for treating small patches. Or commercial preparations containing 50 percent amnitrole may be used. For treating with a small hand sprayer, mix three level tablespoons of the preparation with one gallon of water. For larger areas, mix one pound of the material with 25 gallons of water. Amnitrole may damage desirable plants and grass.

"Brush killer"—a mixture of 2.4-D and 2,4,5-T—is especially handy for treating poison ivy growing among other undesirable woody plants. Treatment will kill both. Most grasses are less likely to be damaged by brush killer than by amnitrole, but there's more danger of drifting vapor from brush killer may damage desirable broad-leaved plants. Using the amine form of brush killer will reduce the hazard somewhat.

A dairyman in the northeast part of the county recently lost a good Holstein bull with rabies. The body of a skunk found nearby made it appear the disease may have been caused by a bite by a rabid skunk. Wild animals often carry the disease. Greatest losses from rabies are in cattle. Symptoms usually appear two to 12 weeks after the animal is bitten. First signs of the disease are loss of appetite, restlessness, stoppage of milk flow in cows and a change in disposition. In furious rabies, the first symptoms are followed by excitement with vicious attack on other animals, violent bawling and pawing of the ground and loud howls in a wailing tone. Loss of flesh is rapid. The animal more quiet about the fourth day when paralysis starts. Death occurs not later than the sixth day.

If symptoms of rabies are observed in cattle or any other animals, avoid all contact, isolate the animal and call a veterinarian at once.

Farmers interested in employing boys for farm work may notify the office of the Illinois State Employment Service at Union, Granite City or Edwardsville. These offices have lists of boys wanting to work on farms. If signs of rabies are observed in cattle or any other animals, avoid all contact, isolate the animal and call a veterinarian at once.

A new report on custom rates for farm operators and rental rates for farm machines has been published by the department of agricultural economics, University of Illinois. Copies are available at the farm adviser's office. The report is issued every other year—this one gives rates used in Illinois in 1961, result of a survey made with farmers and custom operators.

These reports present three rates for every county in the state: the average of all three-day event. Madison county rates reported, expressed to the nearest five cents; the most commonly reported rates; and the usual range of rates for each operation. The number of reports received for each operation is also listed to give some idea of the reliability of the data.

The range indicates that custom rates may vary considerably. Local conditions, such as topography, field size, crop yields and competition will influence rates materially. Some of the custom work was done as an accommodation to neighbors and the charges were not intended to cover all costs. Hence, the rates listed are not necessarily those that should be charged, but represent the charges made during 1961 under a wide variety of circumstances.

Madison county farmers and landowners continue to establish soil conservation practices on their land, reports Anton Salvette, soil conservationist. One effective method of controlling soil erosion is contour farming. Systems of contouring have recently been installed by Lawrence Mersinger, Mrs. Mimmie Raeborn, Robert Fenton, Emil Kiesterman, Leo Steiner and Richard Ellis.

Erosion control structures have been built by William Moulton, John Duncan and Albert Grotenfeldt.

When fire strikes a farm, your greatest enemy is comparative isolation from the local fire department and perhaps also from an adequate water supply. The reason is that fire-fighting equipment is a must on every farm.

Extinguishers in your home, shop, barn, tractor shed and garage, and on your tractor and power equipment. One extinguisher on hand is worth a dozen in the store.

"Brush killer"—a mixture of 2.4-D and 2,4,5-T—is especially handy for treating poison ivy growing among other undesirable woody plants. Treatment will kill both. Most grasses are less likely to be damaged by brush killer than by amnitrole, but there's more danger of drifting vapor from brush killer

HUGE EARTHMOVER roars by the base of the last mound located on the construction site. In a matter of days the only trace of this mound will be in the records of archaeologists. It will be demolished to provide highway fill.

THE SAME MOUND looked like this after several runs had been made through it with heavy machinery. The cuts laid bare cross sections of Indian construction sites, camp fires and artifacts.

PERSONNEL FROM SIU make records and movies of the dig and the three-man archaeological team probes the cut for tell-tale signs of Indian encampments. They found many.

Mitchell Temple Mound Site Probed By Archaeology Team

A three-man team of archaeologists is working against time to glean what knowledge it can from the remains of the Indian temple mounds at Mitchell before the site is completely destroyed. For months it has been a losing battle, fought against the clock and against huge earthmoving equipment. The surface is being stripped away to a depth of 10 feet in some places to provide fill for the new U.S. Interstate Route 270 that is being constructed through the site.

Where there originally was a site of 11 mounds and two villages on about 100 acres, there is now only an 18-acre site with one undisturbed mound and several that are in various stages of destruction. Fortunately, the remaining intact mound is of separate property, near Mitchell school. It soon will be the only visible sign of the temple mound builders in the entire area.

The other 10 mounds were on land owned by construction firm involved in the road building. The last of its 10 mounds was opened May 24 and salvage work is proceeding rapidly for it is slated for destruction in a matter of days.

2 Universities At Work
The archaeological team is headed by James Porter of the Southern Illinois University museum at Carbondale. He is assisted by Charles Baris from the University of Illinois, Urbana, and Alan Harn, also of SIU. The team is working under the auspices of the Illinois Archaeological Survey, a non-profit organization composed mainly of professional archaeologists in the state. Its headquarters is at the University of Illinois, Urbana.

IAS is doing much to explore Indian village sites in the American Bottoms and to chart and salvage the sites before they are destroyed. There already has been wholesale destruction of sites due to the encroachment of subdivisions and highways.

The Mitchell site was one of the last big sites in the American Bottoms. A last-minute fight was waged to save the site but too little was done too late and it was lost, the staff said.

The American Bottoms is a tract of land bounded roughly by the Mississippi river, Alton to the north, Collinsville in the east and Dupu in the south. Included in it are the sites at Mitchell, Dupu and Cahokia Mound state park.

Monte Mound at the park has the largest earthen mound built by prehistoric man and probably was the center of the Mississippian culture. It covers 16 acres at the base and is 100 feet high with ramps and a lower terrace still visible. It was built by hand, as were all the mounds, by prehistoric Indians.

Known Since 1879
The Mitchell area has been known as an archaeological site since 1882. Tests were made there in 1923, but that was the last digging until 1960 when it became apparent that the site was doomed to destruction.

From the archaeological standpoint, the ideal solution would have been to have the area designated a state park. Digging could then have gone on for perhaps the next generation under the supervision of the universities as funds and personnel became available. Actually, an attempt was made to have the area at Mitchell designated a state park where the universities could work at their own rate for perhaps the next 20 years. There is hope that the last remaining mound which is on privately-owned land will become a park.

The team at Mitchell is attempting to unravel the story of a complex arrangement of ceremonial buildings. The structures were built by Indians during the Mississippian Period (800 to 1200 A.D.). The Indians apparently came back to the site annually and continued to build up the mounds and add new structures. As many as 1000 may have been involved in mound-building at the peak of the season.

The buildings probably were of wattle and daub with thatched roofs. Of these all that remain to be seen are the wall trenches. These give perfect outlines of the perimeter shapes of the structures, but it remains for the scientists to figure out which buildings occupied a site at any given time.

Process Of Discovery
The wall trenches were scooped out much as a shallow footing would now be dug. Upright poles were lined in the trenches and earth was filled in around them. Since the exact earth that was removed could not be put back in the ideal spot from which it was taken, there is always a slight tell-tale difference in coloration that shows where the trench was dug and thus the building is outlined.

When the earth is carefully stripped away so that wall trenches on the same level are exposed, the archaeologists can trace not only the number, size and shape of the buildings, but the distribution and placement and possibly even the use.

A particular mound on which the team worked two weeks ago accommodated a complex of about 15 structures. At lower levels there probably were other complexes of earlier periods, for construction apparently went on incessantly.

The Indians may have returned in the summer to grow corn and for ceremonial purposes. There is much to indicate that the mounds had religious significance. In the winter some probably left to hunt in surrounding regions.

Indians Rebuilt Annually
Since the rebuilding apparently was on an annual basis, it takes much time, patience and know-how to figure out which complexes of structures may have stood at the same time as other complexes so as to establish what village probably looked like 1000 years ago.

Post holes are clearly distinguishable in some of the wall trenches. Sometimes poles were pulled out of the ground and yellow sand trickled in and filled up the holes that were left. When the surface of some trenches is flattened by stripping away the dried earth with a spade a regular pattern of such holes has been seen.

The biggest difficulty that is being encountered is the lack of verticle control. Earthmovers have simultaneously exposed wall trenches of different time periods. The earliest remains are at the deepest levels. Mapping of the site is being done horizontally. That is, the relationship of one cluster of buildings to another is established geographically.

At best, however, this method can only result in an educated guess as to what a village looked like, since the time element cannot be determined without verticle control.

In order to save the machines skinned off 20 acres of the site, Porter said, making archaeological interpretation of the earthmoving equipment is complicated. To speed up the road building.

"With money and labor we could figure these things out," he said. "The machines, unfortunately, can't do that." He added that the type of archaeology the team is undertaking is most costly.

Religious Symbol
One group of mounds at Mitchell was arranged to form a circle. In the center was a post pit. It was excavated in 1961 and was found to contain the base of a huge ball of clay. The Indians attempted to remove the post but failed, leaving the base in the pit. The base measured 10 feet in length and it was three and one-half feet in diameter. It weighed 4000 pounds.

Porter believes the post had religious significance, explaining the attempt at removal. He says it probably was broken off at ground level during its removal. Other scientists speculate that there was a shortage of wood and the post was burned.

Near the base of one of the mounds was found the remains of a large fire. It contains several inches of charcoal and other charred vegetable matter, possibly corn.

Carbon 14 tests on charcoal from the Mitchell site are being made at the University of Michigan. The results will be known soon and much more accurate dating then will be possible.

The mound area borders Long Lake along its northern shore. There is also a village site on the south shore of the lake.

Pottery Thrown In Lake
There is evidence that the Indians threw much pottery into the lake. Porter would like to get at it but the road construction has made that impossible. The banks have been broken down into the water, not only burying the pottery beneath the mud but raising the lake level. He feels the whole lake line has been lost as an archaeological site.

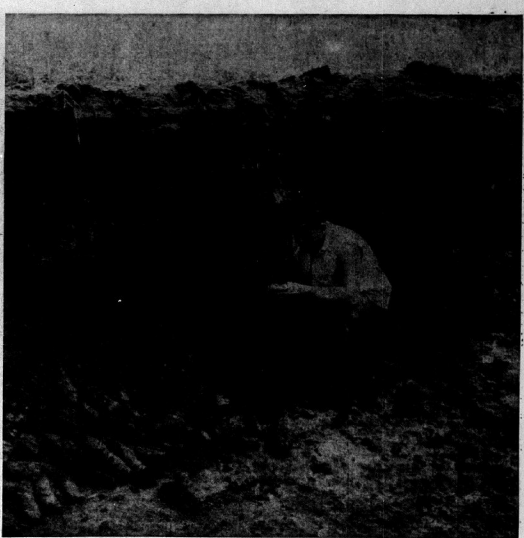

Yet, from the standpoint of archaeology, the Mitchell site has yielded richly in information. The vast amount of information the site could have yielded, however, was infinitely greater.

Had funds and personnel been available, a normal dig could have been accomplished and the entire site mapped and salvaged before it was destroyed. Even though the mounds were to be lost, a comprehensive story of this period of American prehistory could have been compiled from the data gathered.

But funds have not been available and too few people were really interested. Consequently, the digging has constantly been a jump ahead of the earthmovers. As the highway progressed, the team tried to keep ahead of it—digging and mapping, but usually only a day or two ahead of the steel level.

Porter ran all the digs at Mitchell. The destruction of the mound and other sites has left him somewhat bitter. But in the dig at Mitchell he has had the more problems to contend with than fast-moving construction equipment.

Among the frustrations that have beset the team were the people who gave "lip service" but no real help in trying to save the mounds. Officials who failed to take any real action to preserve the sites, the apathy of local people who were more interested in land development than in archaeology, union wage de-

He indicated the largest remaining mound on the construction site. His reference to the deer concerned the record of the flood of 1844 during which a deer was stranded on one of the larger mounds. A farmer rowed out in a boat and shot the animal.

Site Not Glamorous
Perhaps the Mitchell site was not glamorous enough in terms of whole pots and fancy arrowheads. Archaeologists prefer to go to the richer areas where they can dig up whole pots and arrowheads and ship them back in quantity.

From the standpoint of knowledge, however, the Mitchell site has yielded much, even if more was lost than was saved. Among the finds that were made were signs of domestic culture, fortifications, refuse pits, a few human burials, corn cobs, piles of limestone, a micro-blade industry, flints that are foreign to the area, indicating trade with groups as far away as Wisconsin, and pottery.

Salvaged material from Mitchell work can be done.

Porter estimates that with only $40,000 and two months of time, the Mitchell site could have been completely mapped and salvaged. He said that with the money simply was not available. The local help was laid off and the university men carried on as best they could by themselves.

Hope Lutheran Church was the scene Saturday evening of one of the early June weddings when Miss Shirley Mae Luecker, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christ Luecker, 736 East Chain of Rocks road, was married to Norman Williams of St. Louis.

The church was simply decorated with white summer flowers and preceding the 7:30 service Mrs. Darlene Schindewolf sang "O Perfect Love" and the Lord's Prayer, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Eileen Heinke, who played the wedding marches. The ceremony was performed by Pastor Alfred Bule.

The bride wore a gown of white Chantilly lace with long sleeves, pointed at the hands, and a chapel train. The square, scalloped neckline was outlined with pearls and sequins and the bride held a bouquet of white carnations and lilies of the valley. Her veil was secured with a crown of sequins and pearls.

The bride wore a gown of Chantilly and rose point lace. The moulded bodice featured a modified sashina neckline, scalloped and etched with sequins and seed pearls. The sleeves were long and tapering. Two little flower girls, Sheri Scrum and Candice Crombar, wore white dotted Swiss dresses with blue cummerbunds and blue headpieces and carried baskets of flower petals. Scott Hale was ring bearer.

Kaiser Will Aid Aubrey In Leading United Fund Board

Sidney L. Aubrey, active in a wide range of volunteer civic activities, has been named to the United Fund board of directors, a number of years, during the next several months, on his physician's advice. Aubrey is president and Dr. Kaiser is vice-president of the United Fund.

Aubrey will remain as president but has asked the vice-president to preside at UF board of directors meetings for the next several months.

"Completely unforeseen circumstances and a rather insistent doctor have forced me to retire from all activities other than strictly business," he related in a letter Saturday to Dr. Kaiser and members of the executive committee. The school superintendent has agreed to assist.

Vice-president of the Mercantile Mortgage Co. and a resident of 2108 Garfield avenue, Aubrey served as campaign chairman of the 1962 United Fund drive and had planned more active service as the board president than his present health status will permit. John McElride will be chairman and Ernest A. Karandjic vice-chairman of the 1963 campaign.

The admissions and distributions committee currently is preparing a report on two requests for admission as UF participating agencies and one request for admission as UF partner. It will conduct agency budget hearings June 27 and 28, with the board considering the recommendations in July.

The next combined fund drive for welfare health agencies serving the Quad-Cities will be conducted during the fall.

Teenager Is Vitrally Interested In Our Society

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the fourth and last in a series of lectures by Dr. Raymond E. Troyer, Southern Illinois University psychology professor, in the YMCA workshop for youth leaders. Subject of the final lecture is "Planning For and with the Teenager.")

Program planning for and with the teenager, whether by parents, group leaders, or others can be successful only to the extent that the needs which we have been discussing during the past weeks are given priority.

The teenager will be expected to become an adult soon, and be able to earn a living, be a law-abiding member of the community and, in most cases, to marry and raise a family. He should be able to accept the responsibilities, fulfill the duties and enjoy the privileges which go with our way of life.

To function adequately in the important roles they are moving into, teenagers must be able to secure information and make intelligent, considered judgments on the issues they face. To make such judgments, they need a workable philosophy based upon their own moral, ethical, social and spiritual values.

We have shown that youth need to be able to work out these issues with adults and with others of their own age who can appreciate their potential. But in planning or in setting up directives for planning, we recognize they must learn to cooperate with others in the attainment of shared goals. Participation in striving for such goals constitutes one of the major meanings and purposes of life for mature people.

The normal teenager looks at the adult world he is about to enter and finds much that is wrong with it. He sees its inequalities, injustices, and insecurities as challenges to an oncoming generation that aspires to a better world. He wants to pit his strength against these negative forces.

We know our youth are capable of caring deeply about the welfare of others, being sensitive to other people's sufferings and deprivations and of deriving a deep satisfaction from being of service. They are able, with wise guidance, to gather facts, face problems squarely and work to find satisfactory solutions. They are particularly sensitive to unfairness, injustice, and wrongdoing. Any program that takes these into account and enlists youth in purposeful participation in improving our society should succeed.

Serving An Apprenticeship
In the past, we have not offered to the younger generation any such meaningful, purposeful participation in creating a better world. They need important roles which are distinctly theirs, designed for them. This is the place where church groups, fraternal clubs, school groups and the home can serve an important function. Youth could in this way serve a sort of adult apprenticeship which would prepare and train them for the full responsibilities of life to follow.

There are some organizations for youth groups which provide opportunities for important work in the social service of various kinds, but they do not begin to reach the total group of young persons. Life takes on meaning and purpose in direct proportion to the extent to which one takes responsibility for important tasks that make a difference to the welfare and happiness of one's fellows.

The teen-age group is, in a sense, a bridge between generations. When a member has crossed the bridge, the child has become an adult, presumably prepared to create the next generation. The teenager is in a position to see himself in a great perspective as an essential link in an endless chain of human beings, past, present, and future.

As a youth grasps the meaning of successive generations in his own family, he can extend this vision to the human family. He sees that each generation has been influenced by that which preceded, and will in turn influence the generations that follow. Aware of the importance of his influence, the potential contribution which he can make to life for him takes on meaning and purpose that extend beyond the span and limits of his own life.

World Wide Resources
Our resources for planning with the teen-age group are not only by our own point of view. The youth here in the Quad-city faces a world which has expanded beyond any of his childhood concepts; it does not take fantastic imagination now to think of the possibility of exploring other planets. On the other hand, our own world has become a neighbor of every other nation. Hardly a day goes by without news for planning our youth programs are world-wide.

Teen-agers want to participate in various forms of social and recreational activity unhampered by too close adult supervision. They are willing to accept that which is sincerely offered by nondirecting cooperation of their elders. They are, however, what to them appears to be adult-imposed restriction of freedom to share participation in activities that reflect their own felt needs and interests.

Parents, school people, ministers, and other adults concerned with the welfare of youth often experience considerable difficulty in determining the fine line that should exist between too-rigid adult direction of teenage life and cooperative guidance of their activities.

For youth to be given complete freedom in management of their program would militate against their own well-being. However, where older people have sought submission to adult-planned and adult-organized programs, I have seen the young people driven to attempt to satisfy their socially pointed urges and interests through self-initiated, unwholesome practices.

Young people have many and varied interests that range from large-group recreational and entertainment projects to small-group or individual participation in relaxing or intriguing types of performance or appreciation. They like one or more kinds of sports or games; they like parties, picnics, and various other forms of socializing entertainment.

Creative Activities
While recreation should be a part of any program for youth, the things that give them the greatest satisfaction are of an artistic or creative nature. They participate enthusiastically with others of their age in musical or dramatic activities such as glee clubs, bands or orchestras, operettas, plays, pageants, puppetry, and dramatic stunts; they often display great appreciation of classical or semiclassical music, and have a keen interest in the pictorial arts.

With a small, similarly interested group, a teen-age group votes much of his free time following a special hobby such as model airplane, model ship, radio, sewing or knitting, leatherwork, and other crafts. Some young people gain great satisfaction from writing, reading, or discussion groups, and from attendance at lectures, forums, or debates.

Community service activities bring a great source of satisfaction to many youth. Girls volunteer as aides in children's ward of hospitals; boys enter enthusiastically in neighborhood cleanup projects. Both boys and girls take part in community sponsored fund-raising campaigns and similar activities.

Group activities must be attractive and challenging. They will be competing with the glamour attached to some of the less wholesome commercial recreational centers, and must be well organized and democratic.

Most young people have difficulty selecting friends and associating with those that surround them by many people of their own age and older; they often encounter difficulties as they attempt to become active members of groups. In spite of an assumed aggressiveness of attitude, they may be shy and find it difficult to make the initial advances toward others. The usual path is smoothed for them.

Parents can help their teenagers to acquire some skills in social relations with others. They can encourage their boys and girls to bring their own people into the home. If a boy or girl knows that, unannounced, he may bring a group of pals into the home, he may be more likely to do so at any other time, he thereby gains a confidence that has to do with the attitude of others toward him.

A youth's desire to be an active rather than a passive member of a group, his growing awareness of his physical characteristics, and the fact that he is being thrown into new and different groups are the bases of youthful desire for help in gaining social ease. Most young people, unless too many embarrassing situations have caused them to shun participation in activities, like people and want to be with them.

"Practice makes perfect" applies to the development of poise and ease with others just as it applies to the development of any other skill. If a teen-age boy or girl is to acquire ease, he must be given many opportunities for participation in activities.

Small group activities may be planned in order to encourage shy individuals to come out of their shells. Less popular individuals should be permitted to show whatever they can do competently. Help in making friends can be given through arranging partners for trips or excursions, seatmates, fellow committee members, "big sisters" and the like. The discerning leader can usually find some well-socialized person who will not strictly reject a shy member, and an apparent isolate and can arrange for the two to get to know each other.

Program Planning
Program building is a continuing process during which there should occur gradual and observable growth in individual ability to get along with others and to solve personal problems. Growth should be noted in the group's ability to distinguish between programs having constructive value for all and those which do not. Growth in ability to work as a cooperative team should also be noted.

Program is everything a group does from participating in a worship service to a pizza party or developing the organization functionally. If both individual and group growth to result, there are three important principles in relation to building an activities program for teen-agers:

First, the over-all program must be well balanced among mental, physical, social, and spiritual activities. There must be a variety within these divisions and enough flexibility in the planning to allow room for a follow-up of some sudden interest.

Variety is important because of the limited teen-age interest span and because boredom is a teen-age plague. Signs of it need to be watched for since they indicate to the leader that a change of pace is needed. Sometimes a leader needs to remind the group that its president deserves courtesy, but he must use his judgment about doing so.

Second, a program must start at the level of the group's need and interest. A youth group finds satisfaction and value in learning when the interest of the group is in a particular thing as it is at its peak. If the leader knows the individual members of his group he is better equipped to recognize what the dominant interest is and to develop an activity around it at the point where it is keenest.

Must be of Interest
The third consideration is that the decision to develop any specific program idea must grow out of the group in the idea. An idea can come from a club member or the leader, from a newspaper, magazine article, or a community program. The sources are inexhaustible. The limitations are that the idea must have a relationship to the known teen-age interest and needs. It must also have enough scope to provide substance for at least one program meeting and must capture the interest of the majority.

When a youngster has passed through the teen-age period, certain gates close behind him; he will not travel that road again. The program that has been followed, regardless of how it has been planned, will determine a great deal about his future and significant contributions will have been made to his developing personality.

As the teen-age gates close others open upon new roads that lie ahead for the exploration and enjoyment of the young adult. Each period of development during the teen years brings new challenges to parents, leaders and youth; each also offers new opportunities to modify undesirable tendencies and to strengthen healthy ones.

As we have seen, the main questions which concern adult teen-agers alike are the ones they ask themselves, "What kind of a person am I?" and "What kind of a person do I want to become?"

SIU's Near-By Campus Includes Expansion Room

Purchase of relatively inexpensive acreage will insure the religious program, it could provide space for the building.

In terms of utilities, the university is considering a reservoir which would preclude construction of an originally planned $800,000 cooling tower. Also, the reservoir would add to the beauty of the campus and provide for recreational activities.

A heating - air conditioning plant will be situated in the northwestern section of the campus. Electricity will be purchased, and a sewage treatment installation is scheduled for construction. Source of the campus water supply is yet to be determined.

An old railroad right-of-way through the campus will become a scenic walkway and bicycle path with connection possible to the community of Edwardsville. A decision to have two large parking lots instead of six or eight separate ones resulted from an environmental planning seminar last year. Participants recommended that major parking areas be removed from the main campus core, and that the site's natural beauty be preserved at all costs.
